

ManorLane is a platform for community, accountability, and education. We aspire to democratize a demographic that, until today, has been largely disenfranchised and powerless.

There are over 140 million renters in the United States. It's shocking that renters still have no official platform to share their experiences or find support. Likewise, these same renters, when searching new places to live, have no way of educating themselves about the quality of a unit, building or landlord before moving in.

HOA and property management members experience the same reality, frustrated with deceitful business practices and politics, feeling their monthly fees are wasted, leaving their voices unheard.

We aim to improve the circumstances for the silent majority of Americans who live at the mercy of the system that has yet to give them an expression of power and agency.
